

I would like to obtain an internship that relates to legal practice and law. I am currently a first-year student at Mizzou's law school, and I think an experience with legal work with the state would be very beneficial to me and my career.

I have previously had legal experience with a firm in Mt. Vernon, IL, which dealt with probate law and mineral rights. I helped with early analysis in a probate case, became familiar with mineral rights standard practice and issues, and also helped research ethical issues. I have had the experience of almost a full semester of law school, which I believe has introduced me to legal ideology and taught me the basics of legal writing. My work experience and engineering experience have allowed me to become a competent writer and introduced me to many different experiences which I have found helpful in legal analysis. I am very interested in studying law and experiencing opportunities to become better versed in the practice. I would like to work with the attorney general's office if possible, and I am also interested in working with house drafting and house research. These experiences would be very helpful to me, and I think I have acquired enough experiences to be able to perform well in them.

I am also interested in working for the governor's or lieutenant governor's office. I have had previous experience interning with state representatives during last year's session. I have also interned with my member of congress. These experiences taught me a lot about writing drafts, researching issues, and responding to constituents, which I think would be useful skills with the office. I am interested in working with these offices because it would be a greater step in my career trajectory and I believe it would be a very valuable experience to have. I have also been quite familiar with the state of Missouri throughout my life, and being able to help the state in this way would be great.
