

As someone who values multidisciplinary learning strategies, I am confident that I will thrive in the CLIP program. Not only will CLIP expand my understanding of legislative processes, it will entrench me in experience and invigorate my interest in law and government. I am open to a diverse range of internship opportunities. These include public policy, government, law, social justice, gender equality, media, and non-profit organizations. While this list spans across sectors, they would all help me engage in my passion for public service and put me one step closer to my ultimate goal: law school.

After some career exploration, I switched my major to Political Science and Constitutional Democracy with an emphasis in Pre-Law this past semester. Despite earlier uncertainty, one person ultimately inspired me to use my passion for the greater good: my younger brother. My brother was internationally adopted in 2022, and the extensive five-year process greatly familiarized me with the impact of the legal system. I watched as delays, paperwork, and lengthy procedures stole valuable time from my brother's childhood. My desire to alleviate these burdens for other children gives me full confidence in my decision to pursue law.

An internship within the CLIP program reflects that interest. I deeply desire to understand the inner workings of the processes that affect families like mine. My passion and professionalism would allow me to approach this service with great attention to detail. As reflected in my GPA and extracurriculars, I am more than competent to excel amidst this program. I would be elated to serve in offices that work for Children and Families Committees and other legislative opportunities alike. Overall, all of these opportunities would enhance my real-world insight to continue preparing for a career in law.
